OXFORD.

A meeting is called Nov. 12th to see if our citizens will take proper measures to renew the village corporation, which has been allowed to lapse for a number of years. This is an important move toward increasing the prosperity of the village and a full attendance is hoped for.

There has been much discussion as to the origin of the house and the lot it sets on, many claiming the original deed was burned and that the lot went back to the heirs of Amos Wardwell anyway in case the village lost its corporation. The deed has been found and is in the selectmen's hands. It shows the lot was purchased outright for $90.00 and includes 18 inches beyond the building on the east and north sides and 36 inches beyond the building on the south side.

We would like to remind our Bethel correspondent that he omitted one important item of the scenery and beauties of Bethel, and that was a beautiful strawberry bed belonging to Mrs. C. Bisbee of which A. C. Jr., had some fine samples.
BUTTERFLY.

HANOVER.

Will Holt has got home from the lake where he has been running a steam engine on Tom French's boat. Mr. French will build a large boat this winter to run on Richardson Lake. No doubt he will build one that will do business and that will stand all the sea there ever was on the lake. The boat will be about 75 feet long and 13 feet wide. A nice cabin will be built for the transportation of passengers.

Amos Holt and L. M. Virgin are stopping at Birch Lodge Camp at the pond.

No work and lots of loafing in Hanover now.

Owen Dike and Johnnie Baker while crossing the ferry shot a very fine albatross, a sea bird pretty rare in this region.

Owen Dike has got home from the lake and Mr. Putnam and Jones have returned from trapping at Richardson Pond.

Flora Howe has returned from Shelburne, where she has been teaching school.

West Oxford Teachers' Convention.

The West Oxford Teachers' Association met at Denmark Friday and Saturday of last week. Principal Dinsmore of Fryeburg Academy called the meeting to order and offered prayer. Supt. Luce was made presiding officer. Mr. Small of Fryeburg Academy read the opening paper upon the "Characteristics of a Good Teacher."

After a bountiful dinner furnished by the hospitality of the Denmark ladies the following papers were read: "Teaching by Example," written by Miss Adams of South Hiram, and read by an Academy student, Miss Curtis; "The Ring on the Schoolhouse," by Miss Allard of Brownfield, and "Mistakes in Teaching," by Miss Butler of Fryeburg Academy. Principals Purington and Dinsmore and others took part in the discussion.

Principal Purington's address on "Words" in the evening was very highly appreciated.

Saturday forenoon Miss Wilson of Denmark presented a paper on the "Needs of Ungraded Schools," which elicited general discussion, Supervisors Mason, Pendexter and Davis, Senator Poore, and Messrs. Wheeler and Small taking part.

After the queries had been answered by Mr. Luce and the officers had been elected, the meeting adjourned.

The next meeting will probably be held in Kezar Falls.

BUCKFIELD.

Changing rents seems to be the order of the day. C. Gardner has made extensive repairs on the Barrett house and has moved in, so that left his old rent vacant and H. Morrill has moved into that rent, so that leaves Nattie Morrill's house vacant where H. Morrill has been living. The farm of the late Nathan Morrill has been sold to H. Morrill and Rob Dean, so Sam Thomes and wife will move into Nattie Morrill's house. Abel Irish is making extensive repairs on the H. W. Waldron stand and will soon move in there.

Have not heard the particulars of the auction sale at H. N. Chase's, only there was a very large collection of people and two auctioneers were selling goods at once.

Geo. Holland is going to move to one of the Islands near Portland in about two weeks.

Reuben Foss has rented the place where Mr. Holland now lives and will move in as soon as Mr. Holland vacates.

R. C. Thomes is a very handy man to have around. He is always in for improvements. When he cannot make improvements on his own premises he will for some one else. The other day the steps at the door of the M. E. church were out of repair and needed fixing. Mr. Thomes volunteered and went and repaired them in good shape, then went inside and leveled up the furnace and fixed up things generally. I think the church ought to be thankful that they have a man to do such things as need to be done. Mr. Thomes is not a member of the church, but he always pays liberally for preaching and is interested in the welfare of the church.

The Methodist Circle met at Mrs. H. F. Vose's last Tuesday afternoon. A goodly number present and two new members joined the Circle. The general opinion is that the Methodist church and circle have never been in a more prosperous condition than at the present time. We have one of the smartest ministers there is in the conference.
H.

WEST SUMNER.

Ada D. Heath has returned to Boston.

Mary E. Howe went to Lynn, Mass., last Saturday to attend school there.

James Bickwell from North Buckfield was at Wm. T. Bonney's with his threshing machine last week.

E. W. Chandler has returned to Boston to finish up his job carpentering, having stopped at home while the mazons did their work. A. A. Swift went with him.

Mrs. Louise Gurney is still making improvements around her house, which with those previously made by Mr. Coburn make a nice looking place.

Business is pretty brisk, heavy teams can be heard at all times of the day, and even before day, hauling potatoes, apples, etc. Many lots of apples have been cleaned out here for the past week. Buyers of Mr. Irish of Buckfield, and F. L. Barrett of Sumner and vicinity. We are very glad to hear of their success in obtaining this contract.

Mrs. Sarah E. Stowell is a little more comfortable. She had a slight shock of paralysis last week.

Andrew Richardson raised a chamber full of the nicest corn we ever saw raised in Maine. Who says we can't raise corn?

There will be a concert for the benefit of the Bethel Band Wednesday evening, Nov. 12th. There will be selections by the full band, vocal solos, duets and quartettes. After the concert there will be a social dance. All are invited to attend.

Bethel has had its first freeze with snow three inches deep in the lake region. Saddleback Mountain has been covered with snow for two weeks.

Samuel Holt, aged 86 years, accidentally fell Monday and broke the bone in his hip. Uncle Sam cannot survive the shock. His case is doubtful.

Calvin Bisbee has hired the elegant store in the new Odd Fellows Hall and will put in a line of fancy and dry goods and will also run his old store as a general store.

The trustees of Gould's Academy held a special meeting at the Academy hall, Tuesday at 2 p. m., to see if they will vote to make it a free school to be run by the town.

Some ten car loads of apples have been shipped from Bethel station this fall. Seven hundred bushels have been canned at the corn factory.

Mrs. U. O. Straw of Ubet, Montana, who is visiting friends at Bethel and Bangor, will return in about two week.

The ladies' social circle will meet with Mr. and Mrs. Record Thursday afternoon for work.

We would like to remind our Bethel correspondent that he omitted one important item of the scenery and beauties of Bethel, and that was a beautiful strawberry bed belonging to Mrs. C. Bisbee of which A. C. Jr., had some fine samples.
BUTTERFLY.

HANOVER.

Will Holt has got home from the lake where he has been running a steam engine on Tom French's boat. Mr. French will build a large boat this winter to run on Richardson Lake. No doubt he will build one that will do business and that will stand all the sea there ever was on the lake. The boat will be about 75 feet long and 13 feet wide. A nice cabin will be built for the transportation of passengers.

Amos Holt and L. M. Virgin are stopping at Birch Lodge Camp at the pond.

No work and lots of loafing in Hanover now.

Owen Dike and Johnnie Baker while crossing the ferry shot a very fine albatross, a sea bird pretty rare in this region.

Will Thomas and L. M. Virgin have returned home from camping out at Howard's lake. People thought they were lost and sent two boys after them and found them returning.

Owen Dike has got home from the lake and Mr. Putnam and Jones have returned from trapping at Richardson Pond.

Flora Howe has returned from Shelburne, where she has been teaching school.

West Oxford Teachers' Convention.

The West Oxford Teachers' Association met at Denmark Friday and Saturday of last week. Principal Dinsmore of Fryeburg Academy called the meeting to order and offered prayer. Supt. Luce was made presiding officer. Mr. Small of Fryeburg Academy read the opening paper upon the "Characteristics of a Good Teacher."

After a bountiful dinner furnished by the hospitality of the Denmark ladies the following papers were read: "Teaching by Example," written by Miss Adams of South Hiram, and read by an Academy student, Miss Curtis; "The Ring on the Schoolhouse," by Miss Allard of Brownfield, and "Mistakes in Teaching," by Miss Butler of Fryeburg Academy. Principals Purington and Dinsmore and others took part in the discussion.

Principal Purington's address on "Words" in the evening was very highly appreciated.

Saturday forenoon Miss Wilson of Denmark presented a paper on the "Needs of Ungraded Schools," which elicited general discussion, Supervisors Mason, Pendexter and Davis, Senator Poore, and Messrs. Wheeler and Small taking part.

After the queries had been answered by Mr. Luce and the officers had been elected, the meeting adjourned.

The next meeting will probably be held in Kezar Falls.

Harper's Magazine.
ILLUSTRATED.

The important series of papers on South America, by Theodore Child, will be continued in HARPER'S MAGAZINE during the greater part of the year 1891. The articles on Southern California, by Charles Dudley Warner, will also be continued. Among other noteworthy attractions will be a novel by Charles Egbert Craddock; a collection of original drawings by W. M. Thackeray, now published for the first time; a novel written and illustrated by George du Maurier; a novelette by William Dean Howells; and a series of papers on London by Walter Besant.

In the number and variety of illustrated papers and other articles on subjects of timely interest, as well as in the unrivalled character of its short stories, poems, etc., HARPER'S MAGAZINE will continue to maintain that standard of excellence for which it has been so long distinguished.

Chestnut Trees in Porter.

We have been reading the chestnut stories in the ADVERTISER with a good deal of interest, and we now wish to step boldly to the front and tell the readers of your valuable paper about the chestnut trees in the good old town of Porter, which by the way, is the land of our birth.

There are at least 75 of these trees in town, that we positively know of, and there may be more than we have not heard about. Twenty-five of them, or more, bear chestnuts.

On Jesse Bickford's farm are two or three large trees, more than fifty years old, and there are several smaller and younger ones. The large trees bear profusely.

Aucel Alley has a number of trees, and they are fine bearers.

Gilman J. Norton has two trees on his farm, but we do not know whether they bear or not.

Alex. Berry has a half dozen or more trees, all good bearers.

On A. B. Mason's farm are 19

A Conversion.

When the night in starry splendor
Draws her sable curtains down,
And the moonbeams soft and tender
Overlie the sleeping town;
All the night by the immortals
Doors of heaven are opened wide,
And through the celestial portals
Poureth forth a living tide.

Of the angels pure and saintly,
From the starry realms of light,
Whitely, softly, lively, faintly,
Floating downward through the night;
Flowers of song and harps of silver,
Heaving in their wings they bear
From their homes, the bright forever,
In the upper courts of air.

Radiant are those angel faces,
With a love that never dies,
For to here in lovely places,
Dwelling under changing skies.
Heard you there the wondrous singing,
Rivers Ay, or sweetest song,
Softly ebbing, high out ringing
As the bright throng passed along?

One there was who heard the murmur
And he told his comrades so,
But they said "The winds of Summer
Over your fields of fancy blow,"
But the youth will ever remember
How one dark and gloomy night,
When his heart was in December
Came a burst of heavenly light.

And the shackles fell asunder,
Then the prisoner stood free,
No one saw the spirit wonder,
No one heard it there but he.
All that night the bells were ringing,
In the gray dome of the skies,
All that night what singing, singing,
Over one poor angel's prize.

DANA HARLOW.

Hamilton, N. Y.

Joanna's Bracelet.

On a morning early in the spring of last year two men stood leaning against the mantelpiece of a room in one of the government offices. The taller of the two—he who was at home in the room—was a slim, well dressed man, wearing his hair parted exactly in the middle, and a diamond pin in the sailor knot of his tie. He had his frock coat open and his thumbs in the arm holes of his waistcoat. The attitude denoted complacency, and the man was complacent.

"Well, the funny part of it is," he was saying lightly, his shoulders pressed against the mantelpiece, "that I am dining at the Burton Smiths' this evening."

"Ah!" his companion answered, looking up at him with eyes of envy. "And so you will see her."

"Of course. She is to come to them today. But they do not know about our engagement yet, and, as she does not want to blurt it out the moment she arrives, why, for this evening it will be a secret. Still, I thought I would tell you."

He stepped away as he spoke to straighten a red morocco covered dispatch box standing on the table behind him. It bore, besides the flaunting gilt capitals, "I. O.," a modest plate with the name "Ernest Wibberley"—his name.

The other waited until he resumed his place. Then he answered, holding out his hand: "Yes, I am glad you told me, old boy, and I congratulate you most heartily, believe me."

"Thank you, Jack," Wibberley replied. "I knew you would. I rather feel myself that Fate cannot harm me. I have dined today."

"Happy dog!" said Jack, and presently disappeared.

The Burton Smiths, whom we heard them mention, are tolerably well known in London. Burton Smith himself is a barrister, with money and many relations—irish landlords, Scotch members, Indian judges and the like. His wife is young, gracious and fond of society. Their drawing rooms on the topmost flat of Onslow mansions—rooms with sloping ceilings and a dozen quaint nooks and corners—are seldom empty during the regulation hours.

This particular dinner party had been planned with some care. "Lady Linacre will come no doubt," Mrs. Burton Smith had said one day at breakfast, running a list she held in her hand, "and Mr. Bax."

But Burton Smith objected to May. "He will talk about nothing but India," he protested, "and the superiority of Calcutta over London. A little of these Bombay ducks goes a long way, my dear."

"Well, James," Mrs. Burton Smith replied placidly, the Hon. Vereker May is a son of Lord Hawthorn. He will take me in and I do not mind. Only I must have Mr. Wibberley on the other side to make conversation and keep me alive. Let me see—that will be three. And Joanna Burton—she comes that afternoon—four. Do you know, James, when we were at Temple Rothley for Christmas I thought there was something between your cousin and Mr. Wibberley."

"Then for goodness' sake do not let them sit together," Burton Smith cried, "or they will talk to one another and to no one else."

"Very well." Mrs. Smith asserted. "They shall sit opposite to one another, and Mr. Wibberley shall take in Mrs. Galantine. She will be sure to flirt with him, and we can watch Joanna's face. I shall soon see if there is anything between them."

Mr. Wibberley was a young man of some importance, if only in his capacity of private secretary to a minister. He had 1,000 acquaintances, and certainly two friends—perhaps three. He might be something some day—was bound to be. He dressed well, looked well and talked well. He was a little presumptuous, perhaps even a trifle conceited; but women like these things in young men, and he had infinite tact. At any rate he had never yet found himself in a place too straight for him.

This evening as he dressed for dinner, as he brushed his hair vigorously or paused to smile at some reflection—his own, but not in the glass—he was in his happiest mood. Everything seemed to be going well with him. He had no presentiment of evil. He was going to a house where he was appreciated. Mrs. Burton Smith was a great ally of his. And then there would be, as we know, some one else. Happy man!

"Lady Linacre," said his hostess as she introduced him to a stout personage with white hair, a double chin, and diamonds. Wibberley bowed, making up his mind that the dowager was one of those ladies with strong prejudices, who draw their skirts together if you prove a home ruler and leave the room if you mention Sir Charles Dilke. "Mr. May you have met before," Mrs. Smith continued, "and you know Miss Burton, I think?"

He murmured assent, while she—Joanna—actually hands with him frankly and quietly, with the ghost of a smile perhaps. He played his part well, too, for a moment, but halted in his sentence as it flashed across his mind that this was their first meeting since she had said "Yes." He recovered from his momentary embarrassment, however, before even Mrs. Burton Smith could note it, and promptly offered Mrs. Galantine his arm.

She was an old friend of his, as friends go in society. He had taken her in to dinner—that is, half a dozen times. "Who is that girl?" she asked, when they were seated; and she raised her glasses and stared through them at her vis-a-vis. "I declare she would be pretty if her nose were not so short."

He seized the excuse to put up his glass, too, and take a look. "It is rather short," he admitted, gazing with a whimsical sense of property at the deficient organ. "But some people like short noses, you know, Mrs. Galantine."

"Ah! And theatres in August!" she replied incredulously. "And drawing room games! And conundrums! But, seriously, she would be pretty if it were not for that."

"Would she?" he questioned gravely.

"Well, I think she would, do you know?"

And certainly Joanna was pretty, though her forehead was too large, and her nose too small, and her lips too full. For her eyes were bright and her complexion perfect, and her face told of wit, and good temper, and freshness. She had beautiful arms, too, for a chit of 19. Mrs. Galantine said nothing about the arms—not out of modesty, but because her own did not form one of her strong points. Wibberley, however, was thinking of them, and whether a certain bracelet he had by him would fit them. He saw Joanna wore a bracelet—a sketchy gold thing. He wondered whether he should beg it for a pattern or whether it might not be more pleasant to measure the wrist for himself.

But Mrs. Galantine returned to the charge. "She is a cousin, is she not?" she said, speaking so loudly that Joanna looked across and smiled. "I have never met her. Tell me all about her."

Tell her all about her! Wibberley gasped. He saw a difficulty in telling her "all about her," the more as the general conversation at the moment was not brisk and Joanna could hear every word. For an instant indeed his presence of mind failed him, and he cast an appalled glance round the table. But then he beat to his task. "Mrs. Galantine," he murmured sweetly, confidentially, "pray—pray beware of becoming a potato!"

the murmured assent, while she—Joanna—shook hands with him frankly.

The lady dropped her knife and fork with a clatter. "How horrid! A potato, Mr. Wibberley? What do you mean?"

"What I say," he answered simply. "You see my plate? It is a picture, Mrs. Galantine. You have there the manly beef and the feminine peas, so young, so tender! And the potato! The potato is the confidant. It is insipid. Do you not agree with me?"

"Bravo, Mr. Wibberley! But am I to apply your parable?" she asked sharply, glancing across the table with her fork uplifted and a pea upon it. "Am I to be the potato?"

"The choice is with you," he replied gallantly. "Shall it be the potato or the peas?"

Mrs. Burton Smith, seeing him so absorbed in his companion, grew puzzled. Look as often as she might at Joanna, she saw no sign of jealousy or self consciousness in the girl's face. Joanna seemed to be getting on perfectly with her partner: to be enjoying herself to the full, and to be as much interested as any one at table. Mrs. Burton Smith sighed, if the truth be known. She had the instinct of match making. And she saw clearly now that there was nothing between the two: that if there had been any philandering at Temple Rothley neither of the young people had put out a hand—or a heart—beyond recovery.

But this success of Wibberley's with Mrs. Galantine had its consequences. After the ladies had withdrawn he grew just a trifle presumptuous. By ill luck, too, the Hon. Vereker May had reached that period of the evening when India—as seen through the glasses of his memory—was accustomed to put on the rosiest tints, and the two, facing one another, fell to debating on a subject of which the returned civilian had seen much and thought little, and the private secretary had read more and thought not at all. They were, therefore, about on a par as to information, and what the younger man lacked of obstinacy he made up by readiness. It was in vain that nabob blustered, asserted, contradicted—finally grew sulky, silent, stertorious. Wibberley pushed his little triumph, and soon, as we shall see, paid dearly for it.

It happened that he was the last to enter the drawing room. The evening was chilly. The ladies had grouped themselves about the fire, protected from assault, so to speak, by a couple of gypsy tables bearing shaded lamps. The incomers, one by one, passed through these outworks—all but Wibberley. He cast a glance of comic despair at Joanna, who was by the fireplace in the heart of the citadel; and then, resigning himself to separation, he took a low chair by one of the tables, and began indolently to turn over the books which lay on the table nearest him. There were but half a dozen. He scanned them all, and then his eyes fell on a bracelet lying by them on the olive green plush—a sketchy gold bracelet with one big boss—Joanna's.

He looked up at the party—himself sitting a little aside, as we have said—with a stealthy glance. There were none of them facing his way. They were discussing a photograph on the over mantel, a photograph of children by Mendelssohn. He stretched his hand out softly and covered the bracelet. He would take it for a pattern and to-morrow Joanna should ransom it. He tried, as his fingers closed on it, to catch her eye. He would have liked to see her face change and her color rise. It would have added to the faint charm he felt in the boyish, foolish act he was committing if she had been privy to it, yet unable to prevent it.

But she would not look, and he was obliged to be content with his plunder. He slid the gold trifle deftly under the table and clasped it round his arm—not a very lusty one—thrusting it as high as it would go, that no movement of his shirt cuff might disclose it. He had a keen sense of the ridiculous, and would not for all the world that any one besides Joanna should know of the act—that doddering old fossil May, for instance, who, however, was safe enough, standing on the rug with his back turned, and his slow mind forming an opinion on the photograph.

Then—or within a few minutes at any rate—Wibberley began to find the party dull. He saw small chance of a private word with Joanna. Lady Linacre, his nearest neighbor, was prosing on to Mrs. Burton Smith, his next nearest. And he himself, after shining at dinner, had fallen into the background. Hang it! he would go! It was 10 o'clock.

He rose and was stooping across the table, murmuring his excuses to Mrs. Burton Smith, when Lady Linacre uttered an exclamation. He was leaning across her, between her head and the lamp at the moment, and he fancied he had touched her headdress. "Pray pardon me, Lady Linacre!" he cried gayly. "I am just going—I have to leave early—so the encroachment will be but for a moment."

"It is not that," the old lady replied. "But where is my bracelet?" She was feeling about the table as she spoke, shifting with her white, podgy hands the half dozen volumes that lay on it.

No one on the instant, however, took in the situation. Mrs. Burton Smith had risen and was listening to Wibberley. The others were talking. But Lady Linacre was used to attention, and when she spoke again her voice was shrill and almost indecently loud. "Where is my bracelet?" she repeated. "The one with the Agra diamond that I was showing you, Mrs. Burton Smith? It was here a moment ago and it is gone! It is gone!"

Wibberley was still speaking to his hostess. He heard the old lady's words, but did not clearly apply them. He finished his leave taking almost at his leisure, and only as he turned recollected himself, and said, with polite solicitude: "What is it, Lady Linacre? Have you dropped something? Can I find it for you?"

He stooped as he spoke, and she drew her skirt aside, and both peered at the floor, while there was quite a chorus from those sitting nearest of: "What is it, Lady Linacre? Dear Lady Linacre, what h—e you lost?"

"My Agra diamond!" she replied fussily, her head quivering, her fingers groping about her dress.

"No!" some one said in surprise. "Why, it was here a moment ago. I saw it in your hand."

NINE MEN out of ten secure the safest and best cough remedy when they are in need, and therefore the cough in some cases becomes chronic and consumption is the consequence. The remedy which checks the cough soonest, may not be the best

AND safest, but surely the remedy which cleanses and heals the membrane, curing the cough by removing the cause is the proper one to use, and men,

WOMEN and children should seek that remedy which has been found by experience to do this effectually, and do it well.

OUT leaving behind a condition

OF health which is far from good.

10 to one this will be the choice of all who use of cough syrups stuffed with opiates, and dangerous drugs. Cure your

COUGH therefore with Syrup Pix Liquida Compound, as clean, nice and wholesome as honey and as safe as anything can be.

Of all druggists or dealers, 25 and 50 cents, and we guarantee to cure, or money back. Our green and yellow seal is a guarantee of genuineness.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO. BROOKLYN, CONN., May 5, 1890.

Sirs:—Last Summer I cured a Cut upon my horse with your celebrated Kendall's Spavin Cure and it was the best job I ever saw done. I have a dozen crazy bodies, have always used it with perfect success, curing every thing I tried it on. My neighbor had a horse with a very bad Spavin that made him lame. He asked me how to cure it, I recommended Kendall's Spavin Cure. He cured the Spavin in just three weeks. Yours respectfully,

WORCESTER WITHER.

PERSHURGH, OHIO, March 8, '90.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:

Gents—I have used your Kendall's Spavin Cure successfully, on a trotting horse who was a Thoroughpin, two bottles were sufficient to pronounce him sound and all right. Not a sign of the puff has returned. I recommend your liniment to all in need. Yours respectfully,

CHAS. A. HRANCOCK, Forker Row Stock Stables.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 4, 1890.

Dear Sirs:—I have been selling more of Kendall's Spavin Cure and Flint's Condition Powders than ever before. One man said to me it was the best Powder I ever kept and the best he ever used.

Respectfully,

OTTO L. HOFFMAN.

GRAND ISLAND, NEBRASKA, May 11, 1890.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.:

Gents:—I have used your celebrated Kendall's Spavin Cure with excellent results. Please send Kendall's "Treatise on the Horse." Long live Kendall's Spavin Cure that is proving so beneficial to our noble animal, his Horse.

Sincerely yours, F. E. BRAUD.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vermont.

The Romance of Lady Blanche.

Some Misstatements Corrected by One of Her Intimate Friends.

A correspondent of the Boston Herald writes as follows in correcting certain statements concerning the daughter of the Earl of Gainsborough and her husband, former residents of North Conway.

Mr. Murphy and his wife first came to North Conway in the autumn of 1875. At that time Fred Thompson was master of a school for boys at the Three Elms, and Mr. Murphy taught music in the school, Lady Blanche boarding with him there. No one knew her rank at first, but it was soon told that the letters of the unassuming little woman were addressed to Lady Blanche Murphy.

Her story became known, and people talked of the romance of her life. She was the eldest daughter of the Earl of Gainsborough, whose estate is in Rutlandshire, Eng. The family name of the Earl of Gainsborough is Noel. The founder of the family, Noel, with Celestria, his wife, was among the nobles who entered England with William, the Norman. That king granted him vast estates for his services. Many of his descendants were men of distinction.

The earldom of Gainsborough belongs to the proudest aristocracy in the kingdom of Great Britain. Since 1682, the Noel family have possessed the title, but it is within a century that it has passed to the present branch. Lady Blanche's father was the second Earl of Gainsborough. Her mother, who died before she was 20 years of age, was Lady Augusta, eldest daughter of the Earl of Errol.

Lady Blanche was a passionate lover of nature, and became enraptured with the North Conway landscape, and so, although when Mr. Murphy's term of teaching in the school had expired they went away for a little while, they soon returned to stay. At one time they lived for three months in the writer's house.

Lady Blanche was, above all things, not to be pitied for having relinquished rank and the dignity of high life for true love's sake. She as truly possessed the artistic temperament as her husband did. There is no doubt that to the last, as at the first, she preferred the quiet and simple life of independence she had chosen to the one she had left.

The article in Monday's Herald says: "The signature of Lady Blanche Murphy attracted attention as it appeared beneath articles in the newspapers and the lighter magazines." Lady Blanche never signed her title to what she wrote, only "B. M." or perhaps sometimes "Blanche Murphy." She wrote constantly for the Atlantic, Scribners, the Galaxy, the Catholic Review, Catholic World, Lippincott's. Her mind was of the kind generally supposed to be masculine, from its strength and grasp, and her articles were usually learned or argumentative. I have in mind now an essay (in the Atlantic, I think) of hers, Primogeniture from an English Point of View, that would have been creditable to a lawyer.

No life could have been more simple and unostentatious than hers was. She worked away hard at her literary tasks, and, with it all, she remembered the poor, the little children, all to whom she could give comfort or pleasure.

In March, 1881, after an illness of four days, Lady Blanche died, her words and thoughts being those of kindness and loving care for others, and above all, for her loved husband. A dear friend was with her at the last, beside her husband and a nurse. They were not strange hands that robed her for burial. Her body was brought to lie in Christ church the night before the funeral in Portland, because it would not have been possible in the morning to convey it from the Humphrey's Ledge farmhouse to the railroad station in time for the train by which it must go. It was the church Lady Blanche often attended, the church in which her husband played. The rector and his wife were her dearest friends.

The allusions which have appeared in regard to a supposed estrangement from Lady Blanche's family were not warranted by facts. Lord Gainsborough certainly did not approve of his daughter's marriage, and so long as it was not a fait accompli he opposed it. But when the young lady remained firm in her resolve, and opposition was no longer possible, the earl accepted as a fact that which he could not conscientiously approve. Lady Blanche was married from her father's house, and, though she voluntarily expatriated herself, she remained from the first on terms of the most affectionate correspondence with her father and all her nearest relations and friends.

From a letter before me received from his lordship, dated Exton House, June 10, 1881, I copy this: "She was a remarkable character, a genius, but one of a practical and solid disposition, rarely to be met with; a noble woman, as you truly say; a daughter I am proud of. In a letter written eight years ago, she wrote of her determinations to carry out her pet schemes, and hoped she should do nothing that I should not be proud of. She succeeded. * * * I believe she will be remembered by you all as long as you live, and that her influence for good will be felt, and her bravery, industry and heroism be a constant encouragement in long years and trials to come."

And from a letter written by Cardinal Manning to the Earl of Gainsborough, and published in the Catholic World of October, 1881, I copy the following:—"Then came her marriage, the circumstances of which I then partly knew and now know fully. * * * Your conduct at that time must be a great consolation now, for you showed signally a father's prudence, till you were assured of what her happiness required, and a father's love in sanctioning her marriage, with your consent from your residence. The loving and-close correspondence which still united her to you and you to her, when she left you, was worthy of both."

The Earl of Gainsborough lived but a few years after the loss of his daughter, but while he did live his son-in-law, Mr. Murphy, was the recipient of an annuity from him. After Lady Blanche's death, her husband lived with friends in the village, rarely going to the Humphrey's Ledge farm, that recalled his irreparable loss. No other woman took Lady Blanche's place in his heart; he reverenced her memory with a loyalty rare among men. The day after the coaching parade the 27th of August, he left here in perfect health to go to the state fair at Lewiston, Me. After a while he drifted to Boston, but there he had contracted the illness of which he died.

"OH, IF MOTHER WERE ONLY ALIVE!"

All through life she has known a mother's watchful care. She now is a young mother, and gains strength but slowly. She would "give worlds" to do everything for her precious baby, but cannot; the doctor is so strict, and does not sympathize with her, "as mother always did."

That baby has unfolded in the young mother's heart, new emotions. She has a living responsibility, and requires strength to enable her to perform a loving duty. At such a time, too much care cannot be taken, and the Vegetable Compound is indispensable.

ARE YOU GOING TO PAINT? If So, Use the Kellogg, Oil, Paint and Varnish Company's Pure Mixed Paints. These Paints are guaranteed by the manufacturers and agents to be strictly first-class and free from adulteration or Barytes or Paris Whites; also that they will not fade, crack or peel, if properly applied. The basis of the paint is a combination of White Lead and Zinc, which is conceded by all painters to be more durable than either if used alone, but its greatest advantages consists in the superiority of aged Linseed Oil, which is used. Please note that while we claim this paint to be unexcelled, if equalled by any other, we are enabled to offer it at a much lower price, and guarantee it as represented. We have in addition to the above a superior FLOOR PAINT in various size and colors; also a genuine Linseed Oil Iron Paint, made expressly for painting barns, roofs and other work requiring a durable and wearing paint.

Enterprising Bethel.

Lovely View down the Androscoggin Valley.—Beautiful Residences.—Newry Corner, West Bethel, Swan's Corner, South Bethel and Their Manufactures. Summer Boarding Houses and Stock Farms.—Schools and Teachers, Lawyers, Doctors, etc.

A view from Paradise Hill down the Androscoggin valley for miles to Newry Corner presents to the eye a scene well worth painting, beautiful farms on both sides of the river. Crossing the long bridge we pass through Mayville, a small village with one church. Near here is the S. B. Twitchell farm and boarding house. A beautiful spot for city guests always full through the summer season.

Farther down is the Chamberlain mansion erected on a rise of ground, where the late Alpheus Twitchell's home once was. Mr. C. is a retired merchant from Portland. He has made himself and family a beautiful home here. Some $8,000 has been laid out in the building and he is laying out much in grading, setting out shade trees and arranging lawns.

At few moment's ride further down we pass the Bartlett House, better known as the Artist home for more than thirty years. This house has been well known as one of the most noted summer resorts in New England.

Two miles further down after passing through Swan's Corner we come to the Locke House, now run by the Locke girls. Every season from June to October the house is crowded with city guests. From 40 to 50 can be accommodated here.

A few rods up the road is the H. R. Godwin house, known as the Mountain Grove House. This house is three stories high and has seven and twenty first-class rooms. During the past two years on account of Mrs. Godwin being in poor health they have not taken summer boarders.

A short distance will take you to Newry Corner, a small village with one church, one store and a steam mill owned by Mr. Thurston, who is doing a prosperous business in manufacturing spools and dowels.

Here we turn about, go back to Moses Mason's, take the West Bethel road and pass up by the Valentine Spring Grove House, a lovely spot for city guests. Mrs. Valentine has been in the business some fifteen years and knows just how to please her guests.

West Bethel, 4 miles above us, is a thriving village and like the giant oak, Mr. A. S. Bean has a firm grasp here, having done more to build up this village than any other man. Mr. Bean owns one of the largest steam mills in the county. He works up some one thousand cords of white birch into spools ready for the market. During the past two years, Mr. Bean has erected some ten new houses and is now building a new barn 120 feet long, cellar under the whole and when completed will cost some $3,000.

West Bethel contains two stores, one church and is still growing.

One mile up the river on the west side is the Chapman stock farm, situated on or near the Gilead line. Like the White Mountain stock farm in Shelburne, N. H., it has grown up within a few years until now is ranked as one of the first in the list. The farm contains some of the best breeds of cattle in the country. His flock of sheep is quite large.

The Grover House at West Bethel is well known as a beautiful summer resort and is well patronized during the summer months.

One mile above our station is Bethel steam mill owned by W. E. & J. F. Stillings, where a large amount of spools are made and shipped to all parts of the world. The steam mill store and boarding house is close by.

The Richardson & Son steam mill, the steam mill at Swan's Corner and the Virgin mills at South Bethel are doing a heavy business in the spool strip line.

The Russell furniture shops at South Bethel are doing a good business, while a short distance up the road is Virgin's saw mill, where several hundred thousand of lumber are sawed into boards and shingles.

Bean's Corner in the north part of the town is a small village containing one store, post-office. Some of our best farmers reside here.

Middle Intervale three miles up the river is a small village with one church, where services are held during the summer months. The Carter and Kimball farms are the best ones. They cut about 50 tons of hay and keep fine graded stock.

Our school advantages are very good. The schools have been graded and the system is one to command the respect of towns and cities of much older growth. The primary schools are distributed around the town for the best benefit of the small schools but the intermediate, grammar and high schools are held in our large, two line buildings, Gould's Academy, finely located as could be desired.

The teachers are experienced and love their work so that in this line we can ask no more. A pupil can fit him or herself for active business life or prepare for a college course.

For lawyers we have Judge R. A. Frye, A. E. Herrick, esq., and Parkes. All are skillful advisers and rank as high as any attorneys in the county.

For doctors, we have Hill, Martin, Tyaddle and Wiley, the latter the oldest doctor in the county yet he is seen on the road every day attending to his patients. To look at him as he rides past he seems more like a man 60 years old but he has reached his four score years.

The apple fever is raging at its highest pitch. Some ten car loads have been shipped from Bethel station and several hundred bushels have been canned at the corn factory, all common fruit while the grafted fruit has not been sold yet, held back for higher prices.

J. G. Rich, esq., has rented the late David Hammons house on Broad street and will move into it next week. Mr. Rich has an office room in the Brock Block, where he has all he can do to attend to pension cases, just driven from morning till night.

Magnetic Wonders.

The Journal gives an account of an Oxford County man at a magnetic setting. Oscar Whitman was born on Grolier Hill in the town of Bethel but now lives in Lewiston.

Mr. Whitman pulled the kitchen table out into the dining room floor. It was an ordinary pine table weighing about 40 lbs., and used by Mrs. Whitman as a cooking table and finished with sides that let down. It was examined carefully by all and was a harmless, consistent, well behaved, innocent, pine-wood table, just relieved of a rebellious disposition, ready for the manipulations of the magnetic current generated by Mr. Whitman's system.

Now in the first place Mr. Whitman disclaims all faith or belief in the ordinary tenets of spiritualism. He is a consistent, active, working member of an evangelical church in Lewiston, and a member of the Bethel Masonic Lodge. He says that the sensation during the operation is like that of a current of electricity and that his fingers prickle as though they were asleep.

"Are we ready" said he with a smile as he sat in a wooden chair at one end of the table.

Everybody nodded and Mr. Whitman, who is a fine looking man of but little more than thirty, put his hands on the end of the table, elevated the palms so that only the tips touched the table and waited.

"He is a little nervous," said Mrs. W., "perhaps he will not be able to do it."

About two minutes passed and suddenly the end of the table nearest Mr. Whitman lifted about six inches from the floor and was held there by an apparent (one might say evident) attraction to his finger tips, the two other legs of the table remaining of course upon the floor. Mr. Whitman put it back upon the floor, lifting it again and again with the greatest ease.

Placing his hands once again as before, Mr. Whitman pulled the other end of the table up by means of his finger tips, tipping the whole weight over upon himself. He did both of these tippings innumerable times and always with nothing but the points of his fingers upon the table. Next, he flipped the table from left to right and from right to left landing it in the middle of the floor amid the laughter of those who saw it.

It is one thing to tip a table towards you by your finger tips because you might have strength enough (although if you think so you should tip it some time and see) but it is another thing to put the tips of your fingers in the center of a table and lift the whole table body of four legs from the floor and hold it in mid-air. Mr. Whitman did this easily.

Following this Mr. W. put down the legs of the table and while he could snap up the left one by putting his finger tips upon it and drawing upward, the other would not come and he said that he had never been able to to pull up the right table leg, or rather he had never been able to pull up either of them with his right hand.

The next test was of strength. A gentleman pre-cent weighed 180 lbs. to Mr. Whitman's 135. When it came to pulling by ordinary strength on the table, one at each end, the latter was overpowered and was dragged across the room.

"Now," said he, "I will put on the current (it was called so for convenience) and you can hang on to the table and see if I can't take it away from you." The gentleman got a good brace for his feet, took off his coat and was ready. Mr. Whitman put his finger tips on the other end of that table and just seemed to say to it "come" and it came, and the gentlemen or even two more must just like him, could not have held it.

"How did it seem?"

"It seemed all right until he began to 'put on the current' and then it took all the strength out of me and he could pull me as he chose."

A series of experiments were now tried with obstacles imposed between the table and Mr. Whitman's hands.

First Mr. N. picked up the braided rug lying before the stove. Mr. Whitman lifted the table through one fold (i. e. two thicknesses) then through four thicknesses, then through eight, the latter making a thickness of at least eight or ten inches. With sixteen thicknesses he was unable to do it. He next took a baling-pan of new tin which Mrs. W. brought from the pantry. He lifted the table with his hands upon this.

Two remarkable feats were next performed by Mr Whitman. The first was with a pane of glass just purchased and not previously taken from the paper wrapping. He removed the wrapping, put the glass on the center of the table, put his finger tips on it and lifted it and the table—the glass adhering as though it were a part of the table.

Then he took four spools from the sewing machine, put one at each corner of the square of glass and lifted the table through this—a very remarkable feat especially since the spools were of unequal height and only three of them touched the glass—the fourth being too short. On the stove the tin-teakettle was humming. The cover had a wooden knob as a handle. Mrs. Whitman took the cover off and passed it to her husband, saying, "I don't believe you can lift it through that."

Mr. Whitman had never tried this but he lifted the table through it without difficulty.

He now did something marvelous. He put one finger tip on the wooden knob of the ten-kettle cover and he lifted the whole table, the cover and the table seeming to swing from the mysterious attraction in the finger tip.

He then placed the ten-kettle cover and the knob alone touched the table. He put one finger tip upon the inside of the cover over the knob and with this full touch of the tips of the table he attracted the table upward, clear of the floor, and held it there as handily as you would lift a peck basket by the handle.

Many other feats he did. He seated a gentleman in the chair and himself sitting in a chair with his finger tips upon the table-end lifted the whole—man and table, up clear of the floor and pitched the gentleman into the corner by the twistings of the table in air.

He lifted the table through the obstruction of a sofa pillow taken from under the arm of the writer who sat on the couch near the window. He lifted it through a stove pipe taken by Mrs. Whitman from the pantry. Nothing seemed to obstruct the current and he could do anything with it.

We have given illustrations enough to show the great power of this gentleman. Mr. Whitman is essentially modest, and does many most interesting things of this sort. He says it wearies him the next day. He first noticed the power when ten years old. He was at play and had a chair for a horse. He put his hands on the chair and said, "Come!" and the chair moved towards him.

The power has never since left him. He is an expert shoe-maker of the Gay, Woodman & Co. shoe factory and he aspires neither to fame nor notoriety in this direction. We have not given half of the tests he performed although they were all similar, viz., to show the wonderful magnetic or electric power of the man.

BRYANTS POND.

Died in North Woodstock on the night of Oct. 31st, John Preble aged about 45 years. Mr. Preble was confined to the house but a few days though he had been in failing health for several months. He was a soldier in the 7th Maine Battery in the rebellion and was a member of A. M. Whitman Post, G. A. R. This is the first death this Post has had since its organization in 1881. Mr. Preble leaves a wife, the daughter of John M. Gallters, and one child. His funeral occurred Monday, Rev. Lewis E. Pease conducting the service.

Dr. J. Ambrose Gallison of Franklin, Mass., is in town.

Chas. A. Davis is stopping in town for a few days, buying stock, poultry and produce of all kinds for his Haverhill market. He has shipped from this station twelve carloads of stock this fall. Friday, he sent six hundred chickens and turkeys, two hundred and fifty lambs, ten hogs and a ton of produce. A lively business for farmers.

How Shall Teachers Grow in Efficiency.

The following paper was read in the Teachers' Institute by Margaret L. Libby:

Our subject is a broad one, and admits of much discussion, and needs much thought and careful study, both in theory and in practice.

First of all, all teachers cannot grow in the same manner. We have to instruct or govern each child, under our charge, according to his or her disposition; and so must we, adapt methods and ways, to fit our own peculiarities. No two people can govern, nor be governed in exactly the same manner, and bring about the highest results of good.

Each one of us is a separate life, and mind, wholly distinct from, yet wholly dependent on, each other. There is a great deal of chemical nature in our "make-up." Put a drop of muriatic acid upon the quartz, and it will produce no effect, a little of the same upon the lime-stone, and it boils, and hisses, showing that there is a difference in the composition; although to the untrained eye, the experiment seems the same,—a drop of acid applied to a bit of rock. And so the words and acts of one person, may have such different influences upon those, whose mental compositions so widely differ.

Each one must be himself, and his work will be more or less characteristic of him.

You may accomplish the same end as Mr. A. or Miss B. and be as perfectly successful as either of them, but yet work in an entirely different way, and it is in this that lies the secret of your success.

Were you obliged to faithfully copy the manner of each of these, you would be ill at ease, and constrained, and your pils would recognize the fact, and your work would be a failure. When we borrow the garment of another's methods, we must so modify and adjust the seams that it may fit ourselves.

It should be the aim of the teacher, not to teach the child his lessons, but to teach him how to get them by himself.

It is not that the teacher knows the fact that two and two make four, nor wholly that he may make the child know the same, but that he is capable of instructing him so that he will appreciate how to arrive at the result of three and three. A teacher, in order to do the greatest good, should love his work, and do it from choice.

The system of education, and the methods of to-day's teaching, will largely determine the character of the coming generation. How then, can we prepare ourselves to meet this responsibility. Experience is our best teacher, but we cannot wait for that.

Study your own weak points, make note of them, and practice at all times, a series of mental gymnastics, which shall strengthen them.

Do not be offended, nor discouraged, if you are told in a kindly manner of some failing. None of us can attain perfection. It is like the mirage of the desert, always so far in advance of us.

Visit other schools. This is one of the greatest helps and is open to every one. Don't go in with the air of a critic, but criticise your own self and work, using the school you are in, as a basis on which to form your calculations.

Be in sympathy with your school. Put yourself in the pupils place, try to understand them, and lead them to understand you.

Outside the school-room and in, have as little of the "teacher" about you as is consistent; be social with them, and around them.

Be their friend, their guider and helper at all times; be too, their governer and master, but don't let them know the latter part of your relation to them. Restraint is not a pleasant feeling to any of us.

Make your school-room as nearly a home as possible. Be careful, very careful of those who are less fortunate, who are not so ready of comprehension,—they will be very quick to understand an impatient word or discouraged look. Take time. You cannot expect to achieve Utopia in a day.

A continuous stream of talking and explaining is irritating and confusing to the pupils. Five minutes quiet study will do wonders in concentration and order. Never forget your own school-days and that they brought trouble to you, too. Follow the advice of Josiah Allen's wife, and "keep calm, Josiah, keep calm."

Read much of ways and methods of teaching, and talk over affairs with your fellow-teachers. Do some studying for yourself, apart from your work. This establishes a yet closer bond of sympathy, and helps you to better keep in mind the difficulties of hard study.

Much more might be said, but there are many more competent than myself to say it. That the future system of education, must be greatly improved, is assuredly true, and we as teachers must do our part, be it ever so small.

Then we will—

"Work in love, in faith, believing the seed we are sowing will blossom and bear fruit to the Master's glory."

If We Were Young Again.

Professor L. P. Roberts is director of the college of agriculture in Cornell university. He is a gentleman of wide knowledge, full of enthusiasm, and a "self made man," as it is called. Professor Roberts has been asked what he would do if he were young again. Here are some of the things he mentions, in The Rural New Yorker, that he would do if he were young again. They are well worth the attention of those who are young still:

I would visit the school committee to see if they would not hire a teacher who would conduct me through the arithmetic successfully in two years instead of seven; one who had lost the art of spending fifteen years in merely teaching to form twenty-six simple characters. If I were a youth just entering my teens I would want a teacher who had both inspiration and aspiration; one, in fact, who knew more than I did, so that I might be taught what to eat and how to eat; how to work and when to play; how to grow strong and beautiful; how to become good and true, and how and to whom to give thanks. Then I should want explained to me in the most simple language the uses, beauty and pleasures of knowledge, so that while giving thanks for the blessings enjoyed, a holy zeal, a consuming desire for knowledge would possess me. I should want a teacher who could point out the road, who knew of the schools of higher training, their specialties, their character and quality.

I would divide my time into two parts, one for rest and sleep and one for activity, and these two parts should not exchange beds or hunting together. The hours of activity would be devoted to work, to getting strong and beautiful, to acquiring knowledge and to meditation. As the hardest thing a young person has to do is to "keep still" in the easiest is to put forth muscular effort, I should be careful not to work too long or hard, in order that vitality might be left for the harder effort of thinking.

I would try to get such training and understanding that I could work for myself profitably; that is, I would avoid being so poorly equipped that I would be compelled to employ some one else to direct my labor, by getting the lion's share, getting what was left. I would get at least two strings to my bow, so that if the world had no "long felt want" which my theoretical knowledge could fill, I could make a washboard, a shoe or an apple barrel. I would inspect carefully many of the open doors which are labeled "Education," having found the one best suited to my desires. I would enter and not come forth till I could do several things well enough to attract attention, and I would "kick" if anybody thrust me into the wrong door.

Rev. Will C. Wood of Boston, will preach Nov. 9, at 10:30 a. m. Subject, "The Judgment Day and the Opened Books;" at 7 p. m., subject, "Ten Consciences." Sabbath school after morning service, A. G. Bean, Supt., subject, "Jesus before Pilate and Herod." At 3 p. m., P. S. C. E. at Clark's school-house led by Mr. Wood, subject, "The Gospel Invitation." Sabbath school library books are desired to be returned at once. Those desiring to join "Home Department" of Sabbath school should send in their names.

RESTORED HIS WIFE'S HEALTH. My wife suffered for years from debility and a general breaking down of health, the result of disease peculiar to women. A few bottles of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) restored her to perfect health. It built her up, increased her appetite and weight, until she is now the picture of health. The speedy recovery of my wife from her long illness caused all my family, and several of my neighbors, to take S. S. S. As a tonic we are all delighted with it. GEORGE FLAMMER, Covington, O.

BABY CURED. My baby had the worst case of Catarrh that I ever saw a small child afflicted with. The nasal discharge was very large and very offensive. Having some personal knowledge of the curative properties of S. S. S., I gave the baby a course of S. S. S., using nothing else. In a short time the discharge from the nose stopped, and the Catarrh was cured entirely and permanently, as there has been no return of it since. DAVID ZARTMAN, May 10, '90. Woman's Intuition. NEARLY ALWAYS RIGHT IN HER JUDGMENT IN REGARD TO COMMON THINGS. An old gentleman over seventy, came into the city from his farm, without his overcoat. The day turned chilly and he was obliged to forego his visit to the fair. To a friend who remonstrated with him for going away from home thus unprepared, he said: "I thought it was going to be warm; my wife told me to take my overcoat, but I wouldn't. Women have more sense than men anyway." A frank admission. Women's good sense is said to come from intuition; may it not be that they are more close observers of little things. One thing is certain, they are apt to strike the nail on the head, in all the ordinary problems of life, more frequently than the lords of creation. According to Dr. Alice Bennett, who recently read a paper on Bright's disease before the Pennsylvania State Medical Society, persons subject to bilious attacks and sick headaches, who have crawling sensations, like the flowing of water in the head, who are 'tired all the time' and have unexplained attacks of sudden weakness, may well be suspected of dangerous tendencies in the direction of Bright's disease."

The veteran newspaper correspondent, Joe Howard, of the New York Press, in noting this statement, suggests: "Possibly Alice is correct in her diagnosis, but why doesn't she give some idea of treatment? I know a man who has been 'tired all the time' for ten years. Night before last he took two doses of calomel and yesterday he wished he hadn't."

A proper answer is found in the following letter of Mrs. Davis, wife of Rev. Wm. J. Davis, of Basil, O., June 21st, 1890: "I do not hesitate to say that I owe my life to Warner's Safe Cure. I had a constant hemorrhage from my kidneys for more than five months. The physicians could do nothing for me. My husband spent hundreds of dollars and I was not relieved. I was under the care of the most eminent medical men in the State. The hemorrhage ceased before I had taken one bottle of the Safe Cure. I can safely and do cheerfully recommend it to all who are sufferers of kidney troubles."

The Hazen & Starbird Cottage.

A poem by Kate W. Houghton read at the dedication of Pine Grove Cottage, owned by George Hazen and C. F. Starbird, on the shore of Thompson Pond in Oxford.

O fair as rhymed Doon or Ayr,
Fair Thompson laughs along its narrows,
Or dreams in autumn meadows where
Chant Aphrodite's sparrows.

The light wind crept along the banks,
The golden sunbeams darted
Between the tasselled alder's ranks,
While up the lake we started.

The blackbirds jeered us from the shore,
And on the brown waves rocking,
Our rowers stilled their plashing oar,
To echo back their mocking.

We watched the swallow dip and dash
Beneath the minnie billows;
We saw the fire-bird's red wing flash
Through the pollarded willows.

Around the cedar's sombre breast
The yellow-hammer circled,
And from the maple's nodding crest,
The crimson bloom was hustled.

Far off the little village lies,
Half hidden by the trees,
That line the shore on every side,
And stir with every breeze.

The rowers paused below the bluff,
To view the cottage from the lake,
And as it meets their raptured gaze,
A shout breaks forth—the wild woods quake.

The cottage is owned by Hazen,
A lawyer in the town,
Together with Frank Starbird,
A clerk of some renown.

The cottage stands upon a bluff,
Not far above the sandy beach,
Among the trees and boulders rough,
Beyond the waves incessant reach.

O little cottage by the lake
To thee we sing our praise!
O joyful day in autumn,
In tuneful voices raise!

O dim-led wave, not Danube's grace,
Nor Tiber's classic flowing
Shall ever from the heart efface
That happy morning's rowing!

Where'er our exiled feet are set,
Whate'er life's portion to partake,
The homesick heart will ne'er forget
The cottage by the lake.

BRYANTS POND.

The Universalist Sewing Circle will meet with Mrs. Annie Day, Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 5th.

The Universalist Fair will occur at the Town Hall, Nov. 12th and 13th. The Locke's Mills Band will be in attendance. Much interest has been manifested and a good amount of labor expended to make the coming entertainment every way successful.

Mrs. Amanda Sheran has had her house raised up two feet and a good underpinning of brick put in, and besides other repairs has now a good cellar under the whole house. Samuel S. Felt did the work and he is a good workman too.

PARIS HILL.

Mr. Houghton, the oldest resident in this village, died last week at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. W. K. Greene. His remains were carried to Weld.

Stront, the milkman, found one of his horses dead in the stable one morning last week.

The village schools close this week. They have been under the instruction of D. A. Gates and Stella M. Bowker. Mr. Gates has taught the High School several years but this is Miss Bowker's first term in the village. She has studied for her profession at the Normal School and is a fine teacher. She took part in the Teachers' Convention at Norway last week.

Harry Whitman is refreshing his house with a coat of paint.

A resident of this town, we are informed, so far forgot the day of the week, that he took a load of poultry and started for South Paris to market them on Sunday a week or two ago.

A series of special meetings have been held at the Baptist vestry the past week.

ADDAY.

Dea. J. H. Lovejoy, who has laid in a critical condition for five weeks, is a little more comfortable, although he considers his work about ended. He has resigned his office of town treasurer, which he has held for forty-four consecutive years, also resigned the office of postmaster, which he has held forty years, and within this time he held the office of selectman and town agent. He has also been justice of the peace for fifty years, has twice represented his district in the legislature, the last time being brought out as the strong man to put against the combined force of the democratic and greenback party, a place he filled to the acceptance of all. He has been a contributor to the newspapers for many years, and when writing has something to say and says it.

Rev. Will C. Wood of Boston, is supplying the Cong'l pulpit for a few Sabbaths. All join in wishing we could secure his services for a longer time.

Rev. I. A. Bean and wife of Conway, N. H., called on friends here at the Corner on their return home from a visit to his old home and birthplace in Mason. He attended the services at the church Sunday evening and gave a short but interesting address.

On Saturday evening of last week the Grangers held a box festival at their hall, which drew a good sized crowd and some cash profit to the members. In connection with this there was a lecture on temperance by J. H. Hamilton, a W. C. Templar.

The remains of Mrs. C. T. D. Crockett of Standish, were brought here for interment. The services took place at her brother's, W. W. Bird's house. She was buried beside her father and mother. Sermon by Rev. Will C. Wood. Rev. C. T. D. Crockett, husband of the deceased, has the sympathy of many friends here in Albany as he returns to an empty home, having no children to sooth his aching heart.

Mrs. Dora Getchell has returned to Lewiston for the winter.

Alexander Cross of Boston, is visiting his mother here at the Corner. With him came a man and a dog to hunt our wild hens (partridges) which are very scarce here.

Gilbert Wardwell has been appointed as town treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dea. J. H. Lovejoy.

A sad accident occurred at Lynchville, Saturday. Edwin Lawrence while loading logs, the team started causing the logs to roll and brought his head between two of them nearly crushing it. The blood oozed from his mouth, ears and eyes and at present the outlook is dark for his recovery. READER.

Mrs. Charles Amo from Gorham has been down this way on a visit.

Why don't the road surveyors or the "fathers of the town" look after some of the dangerous places in the road? The bridge over mill brook is in an unsafe condition, the long hill is a public nuisance owing to a spring of water midway of it. Don't all speak at once.

George Mason and wife are at the lakes on a visit.

George Stearns and Charlie Verrill are down to Stony brook at work.

A large company gathered at Harold Chapman's the evening of the 28th to make merry with Hal and Nettie, it being the 5th anniversary of their marriage. A pleasant evening was spent. Music, games, jokes and much laughter was the program. After partaking of the generous treat the people departed leaving many substantial gifts as tokens of good will towards Mr. and Mrs. Chapman. May they live to celebrate their Diamond Wedding.

School closes the 7th for a short vacation. There is a flying report that the schoolhouse is to be repaired. The children and teacher will be thankful if it is a fact.

We congratulate that young man from China, who came up and took one of Bethel's fair girls as a wife. UNO.

Good Axes Warranted.

Who does not like a good axe? and who does not despise a poor one? I have both with price to fit each kind. Who ever saw a poor Hinds Axe? I never did and I have sold lots of them. My whole stock of last year and year before all sold, all warranted, not one returned. How is that for a record? Now I have lots more of them, three grades, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. The two best ones are warranted. Best of handles made by Gammon to go with them at a fair price.

Potatoes are rotting badly in the cellar in this section.

The writer made a flying trip through a portion of West Oxford Co. last week, making a short stop at Fryeburg, the most beautiful village in western Maine and the only one that has such nice facilities for public travel as they have, a stage to the depot, that makes some six or eight trips daily, also horse cars the entire length of Main street to the depot. We passed the evening with Mr. Dinsmore and lady, the very popular principal of Fryeburg Academy, who is in every way a gentleman of high culture, and who seems to be very much interested in the students under his charge. We also visited the famous Chautauquan grounds which are very beautiful, and Jockey Cap and took some specimens home with us. The weather was all that we could wish, and during our stay in that pleasant village nestled in among the mountains, Mount Pleasant and Mt. Tom on the east, Green Mt. from which the village is supplied with water and Mt. Chocorua on the west, gave us a page in our lives which we shall often refer to as one of the brightest. A.

NEWRY.

There was a social gathering at John Allen's Saturday evening. There was a very large attendance, being some over 60 people present, and all enjoyed themselves and the splendid treat afterward. LOVELL.

On Tuesday evening Grover Post, No. 159 G. A. R. held a camp-fire at the town house. There were three hundred in attendance. A fine supper of beans, brown bread, coffee and pastry was served. After supper the audience was entertained by speaking by the members of the Post and others, recitations, singing and music by Kimball's Orchestra.

On Wednesday afternoon as Dr. E. J. Noyes was driving from No. 4 to the village he saw two bears opposite the watering trough near the edge of the road. One was on the ground and the other on a hemlock log. There seemed to be another one farther down in the woods calling to these two. The doctor drove into the village and some persons went to the place but the bears had left. They saw where three had crossed the road a short distance from where these were seen. The place where they were seen is only a short distance out of the village.

Perhaps we have written it once but it will bear repeating that J. L. Parker raised 260 barrels of apples this year.

The widow, Mrs. John Damon is visiting her daughter at the old place, Mrs. Dell Dunn.

A young man in the neighborhood was helping Mr. Robinson about threshing and was sent to Mr. Dunn's to get his oxen to move the machine. The young man is a great lover of horses. He got the cattle and yoked them up, probably thinking all the time about his very fast pacing colt, but all of a sudden he discovered he had yoked the near one on the off side and by being very smart to run the cattle did not get away from him. He finally succeeded in getting them into Moses Brown's barn and yoked them over. He thinks if cattle can go as fast as that he wants a chance to ride when he drives.

Henry E. Washburne.

The very sudden and unexpected death of Henry E. Washburne has cast a gloom over the circle in which he moved. Mr. Washburne was a native of Belvedere, Ill., and was twenty-nine years and eleven months old. For the past ten years he was a resident of Paris, where he was engaged in the manufacture of chairs. When the factory was burned, the deceased was thrown out of employment. He next removed to Ipswich, Mass., taking up his residence with his sister, Mrs. Newell Jewett. About four months ago he assumed a position in the Ipswich Hosiery Mills where he worked until a day or two previous to his death. On Tuesday of last week he complained of a cold and remained at home. Nothing serious was apprehended until Wednesday evening, when he was suffering with severe pain. A physician was sent for and an opiate was administered without producing the desired results. The doctor then ordered a stimulant but before it could be procured the patient passed away. The funeral took place from the house of Mrs. Jewett on Friday. The remains were interred in Locust Grove Cemetery. A large delegation of Agawam Lodge of Odd Fellows was present and conducted the services at the house, the heavy rain preventing the exercises in the open air. Mr. Washburne was an exemplary young man.

Another Record Broken.

"You hear a good deal said about Nelson breaking his record," said Dr. J. F. True of Auburn, this morning to the Gazette, "but I did a little record breaking myself yesterday. It was of course in the line of removing tape worms. The quickest time I ever did it up to yesterday was 1 hour and 30 minutes, but yesterday I accomplished the removal of a worm in an hour and 28 minutes. If any one can do it quicker than that I want to hear of it. It was from a lady and the same forenoon she wanted to walk up to Perryville but I told her she had better keep still awhile."

The doctor's skill in this respect has given him a national reputation and in these days of record breaking he proposes to keep to the front, as he always has.

Many Clergymen,

Singers, actors, and public speakers use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is the favorite remedy for hoarseness and all affections of the vocal organs, throat, and lungs. As an anodyne and expectorant, the effects of this preparation are promptly realized.

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has done me great good. It is a splendid remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs, and I have much pleasure in testifying to its merits."—(Rev.) C. N. Nichols, No. Tisbury, Mass.

"In my profession of an auctioneer, any affection of the voice or throat is a serious matter, but, at each attack, I have been relieved by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy, with ordinary care, has worked such a magical effect that I have suffered very little inconvenience. I have also used it in my family, with very excellent results, in coughs, colds, &c."—Wm. H. Quartly, Minlaton, So. Australia.
